

A Theft at the Clothes Shop

by George

This morning, I went shopping at a clothes shop with my mum. It was my birthday, so my mum said I could buy anything I wanted in the clothes shop. When we were in the clothes shop, I saw a woman selecting clothes. After a while, a strange man with a weird look stared suspiciously at the woman's handbag from outside the window.

I kept shopping, but then the strange man went into the shop. I thought it was somewhat strange because the man approached the woman quietly. I felt extremely uncomfortable. He even took the woman's purse from her handbag. Therefore, I told my mum to call the police.

But things took an unexpected turn. As the weird person ran out of the shop, the police chased him all around the town. Suddenly, a swarm of police rushed in front of the weird person. Then the police shouted, 'You can't make an omelette without cracking some eggs.' At last, the weird man was arrested. From what happened to the lady, I learned to always be cautious of my belongings.
