

A Diary Entry by Charley Fung

11 May 2026

Rainy

Dear Diary,

Kelvin and I stayed at home this afternoon. I was studying for my examination coming up next week. The house was very quiet, and I could even hear the rain splashing on the ground! But suddenly, Kelvin stormed in with his basketball! Yelling ‘Sarah! I’m going to practise something.’ ‘Sure!’ I responded, not thinking what would happen next...

Kelvin was literally playing basketball indoors! I didn’t pay attention to him because my exams are more important to me. Kelvin kept bouncing the ball up and down. It looked like he would lose the ball if he didn’t keep bouncing it!

When he was trying to make a three-pointer, he missed! I heard a loud ‘Bong!’ It was the basketball! The vase my Mum bought a week ago was wobbling off the shelf! Kelvin’s first instinct was to scoop the cat away while I was too stunned to speak! BANG! The vase was gone, shattering into small pieces of glass. However, the cat and I were safe. ‘What will mum’s reaction be?’ I said in a shivering voice. Just when Kelvin was about to say something, the door opened, and it was Mum! She was not mad but sad. She quickly ran over to us, holding us tight, asking if we were fine. We answered yes before she pulled us in for a hug. It turned out she saw the whole thing on the CCTV camera! That explained why she was there at the perfect time!

In the end, we learnt that we should not play activities outdoors inside the house. What an interesting day!

